

It's a conversation, not a performance

A sales call, a talk or a video works when you speak with people from the heart about something you care about. It does not need to be a performance.

REMEMBER

- ◆ Performing puts distance between you and the other person. Conversation closes it.
- ◆ Nerves ease when you stop performing and start talking with someone.
- ◆ You do not have to be polished. You have to be present.

YOUR TURN

Where I slip into performing (sales calls, videos, presentations, networking):

What I am afraid will happen if I just talk:

One person I can picture and speak to when I record or present:

What I truly care about that I want them to hear:

Questions I can ask so it becomes a two-way conversation:

THIS WEEK

Record a two-minute video as if you were talking to one client you care about. Do not re-record it more than once.

Inspired by Richard Greene, "The 7 Secrets of the Greatest Speakers in History" (TEDx).