

Passion they can feel

People respond to an owner who plainly cares. When what you say comes from something that matters to you, they can feel it.

REMEMBER

- ◆ You cannot fake caring for long, and you do not have to be loud to show it.
- ◆ If you are bored by your own message, your audience will be too.
- ◆ Knowing what you are here to do gives your words their weight.

YOUR TURN

What I care about so much in my work that I could talk about it for an hour:

Why it matters to me personally:

Where my message has gone flat or become a script:

What I am here to do, in one sentence:

Where I will say that out loud this month:

THIS WEEK

Tell one client or one audience why your work matters to you personally. Say it in your own words, without notes.

Inspired by Richard Greene, "The 7 Secrets of the Greatest Speakers in History" (TEDx).