

Scarcity, capacity and saying yes to everyone

Chasing every customer and giving to every person both drain the business. Set your criteria and honor your capacity, so your best goes to the clients you are here to serve.

REMEMBER

- ◆ "I need everybody" is scarcity speaking. It puts numbers ahead of relationship.
- ◆ Generosity needs a container. Unplanned giving takes from your real clients.
- ◆ Criteria are kind. They let you give a clear yes and a clear no.

YOUR TURN

Unpaid or off-plan time I gave in the last 30 days:

Who qualifies for complimentary time with me:

How long it lasts, and how many I offer each month:

The clear next step I offer at the end:

One sentence I can use to decline warmly or redirect:

THIS WEEK

Set your monthly limit for complimentary time and put the criteria in writing.
