

What an ad is really for

An ad has one job: to grow the business. If it is beautiful and nothing grows, it failed. If it is plain and the right people come in the door, it worked.

REMEMBER

- ◆ An ad is a growth tool. Creativity only matters when it serves the result.
- ◆ Name the result first: who should respond, and what should they do next?
- ◆ What happens after someone responds matters as much as the ad itself.

YOUR TURN

This ad is meant to bring me (who) so that (what grows):

The single next step I want someone to take when they see it:

The one number that will tell me it worked:

Looking at my last ad or promotion: what was it meant to grow, and did it?

THIS WEEK

Before you run another ad, post or promotion, write its growth goal in one sentence. Cut anything that does not serve that sentence.
