

Be a zealous advocate for yourself too

It is easier to fight for your clients than for yourself. A business cannot last if its owner is the one person nobody is looking out for.

REMEMBER

- ◆ You would never let a client be treated the way you sometimes treat yourself.
- ◆ Chasing goal after goal without rest ends at the edge of a cliff.
- ◆ Your health, your rest and your worth belong on your list of things to defend.

YOUR TURN

What I do for my clients that I do not do for myself:

Warning signs I have been ignoring (sleep, health, mood, relationships):

What I would tell a client who was living the way I am:

Three things I will defend for myself, as firmly as I would for a client:

Who I will ask for help:

THIS WEEK

Choose one thing you need, such as sleep, a day off or a doctor's visit, and put it on the calendar as firmly as a client appointment.

Inspired by Adam Lange, "Think Like a Lawyer" (TEDx).