

Prepare for the hard call before it comes

Sooner or later you will face a decision with no clear rule. The time to decide what you stand for is now, while you are calm.

REMEMBER

- ◆ Hard calls arrive without warning and usually under pressure.
- ◆ Ground rules written in advance are easier to follow than ones invented in the moment.
- ◆ Preparing will not make you perfect. It improves your odds.

YOUR TURN

A hard call I have already faced, and how I handled it:

Situations likely to come up in my business (a refund dispute, a client asking for something improper, a mistake no one noticed):

My ground rules: what I will always do, and what I will never do:

Who I will call for advice when I am unsure:

THIS WEEK

Write five ground rules for your business, each one sentence. Share them with your team or one person you trust.

Inspired by Michael Schur, "How Ethics Can Help You Make Better Decisions" (TED). General education, not legal advice.